By using Microsoft Word, you can create a custom certificate from scratch, follow these steps. Open Microsoft Word. Go to "Page Layout" and click on "Orientation." Since most certificates are printed landscape, it's recommended that you select "Landscape." For Word 2003 users, click on "File," then "Page Setup;" then click on the "Margins" tab and select the "Landscape" icon. Go back to Page Layout. Click on "Page Borders." This will give you options on ways to border your certificate. Under the "Art" function, you will find fun borders like stars and hearts, as well as classic line borders. From here, you can also change colors and size of the border. For Word 2003 users, go to "Format," then "Page Border." Enter the title of the certificate of Participation, Certificate of fits the type of certificate that is being awarded. Press enter a couple of times for spacing. Then, in smaller font (around 30-point size), type "Awarded to," or "Presented to." Move down a couple of rows. Make a line for the individual's name to be handwritten on after the certificate is printed. Leave plenty of room. If applicable, include a subtitle. It should say "For the successful completion of" then enter the appropriate phrase. This should be in the same font as the "Award to" line. Create space for signatures, then, underneath the line(s), place the title of the person who will be signing. Finally, click on "Save As." In that window, next to "Save as type," scroll down to "Word Template." Then, hit "Save."
